ABOUT THE CONGRESS

The biennial Congress has gained international importance, aiming at the need for continuous discussion on the development of internal combustion engines not only among technical experts, but also experts in the fields of environmental protection and medicine, legal, social and economic sciences, and politicians.

The aim of the Congress, whose motto is:

QUO VADIS INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINE?

will be to acquire an answer to the question about the future of internal combustion engines. The discussion supported by the exchange of knowledge and experience of specialists representing technical industry, experts in the field of environmental protection and medicine, as well as social, economic, legal, and political sciences will cover the topics related to achievements in the field of design, research, and production of internal combustion engines and alternative drives.
